TRILLIUM HEALTH PARTNERS PREMIERES NEW SEASON OF HEALTH CARE SERIES ON ROGERS TV

(Mississauga, ON) – Trillium Health Partners' television series, Talk Trillium: Partnering for Patients, which explores some of the key health care issues facing this growing community, will launch its second season today on Rogers TV.

Talk Trillium airs three times a week from December 2015, through March 2015, exclusively on Rogers TV Peel. The series takes the viewer on an informative journey through Trillium Health Partners, with glimpses into the innovative programs and dedicated people that make up one of the largest community-based hospital in Canada.

"It is Trillium Health Partners' mission to create a new kind of health care for a healthier community. To achieve that goal we continue to engage with our community to ensure our work reflects the needs of the people we serve," said Michelle DiEmanuele, President and CEO, Trillium Health Partners. "Talk Trillium is an important component of that engagement, providing us with an opportunity to communicate with the people we serve about their health and hospital."

Hosted by Patti Cochrane, the hospital's Senior Vice President and Chief Innovation Officer, each episode features an in depth look at hospital programs and initiatives that focus on improving the health of community members across Mississauga, Brampton, Etobicoke, Caledon and beyond.

"We are thrilled to be launching a second season of Talk Trillium. We received such positive feedback following the first season and we feel very privileged to continue on with this work, said Cochrane. "This series is the perfect opportunity for Peel Region to learn about how Trillium Health Partners and our community partners are working together to offer our community safe, high-quality care that is there for them when they need it most."

This season, Talk Trillium will feature two new segments. Faces of Trillium Health Partners features frontline staff and volunteers whose roles are integral to the hospital's ability to deliver high quality care and an exceptional experience for our patients and their families.
